It's Ready, Steady Go At Grange School

Working on behalf of the Grange School in Hartford, Cheshire, Manchester based planning specialists HOW Planning have been successful in securing approval for the development of a major new £1million sporting facility at this leading independent school.

Working in conjunction with the school, HOW submitted an application to Cheshire West and Chester Council for a new multi-purpose, all weather sport facility providing facilities for hockey, tennis, netball and athletics. The Council has now approved the application enabling the school to progress with the development on which it hopes to make a start with construction commencing on site in summer 2010.

Says Lauren Ashworth, planner at HOW Planning: "This is an excellent result for the pupils at The Grange School. By securing this planning approval we have been able to open up a whole new range of possibilities for sporting success at the school."

Chris Jeffery, Headmaster at The Grange School adds: "We are delighted with this outcome as it allows us to focus on our plans for the future. We have a strong commitment to physical education as we believe it provides pupils with a healthy attitude to life, and are extremely proud already to have a number of pupils who are achieving sporting success on a national; these new facilities can only help take this further.”

The Grange School also has an outstanding academic record, making it among the most successful co-educational schools in the country, as well as its wide sporting curriculum which will benefit hugely from the new development.
